HASILUX : New Online Platform Makes Information on Autism and School Inclusion Accessible in Luxembourg

Luxembourg, January 15, 2025 - With the launch of HASILUX (www.hasilux.lu), an innovative online platform is now available that comprehensively addresses autism and educational inclusion in Luxembourg. Supported by the Œuvre Nationale de Secours Grande-Duchesse Charlotte, this initiative brings together all relevant information and resources in one central location for the first time.

"With HASILUX, we are creating a central resource that makes access to important information easier for everyone involved," explain project leaders Joanne Theisen and Gérard Kieffer from the non-profit organization Crunch Box a.s.b.l. "Our goal is to support educational inclusion for autistic people in Luxembourg through better networking and information exchange."

Comprehensive Resources in Three Languages

The platform offers:

- Over 60 articles on autism and education
- Authentic testimonials from those affected and their families
- Practical advice from professionals
- A growing directory of support services
- A detailed FAQ section (under development)

The content is created by a multidisciplinary team of professionals, teachers, educators, psychological professionals, and autistic people, and is available in German, French, and English.

Working Together for Greater Inclusion

HASILUX is designed for:

- Autistic pupils and students
- Parents and families
- Teachers and educational professionals
- Psychological and psychiatric professionals
- Educational and social sector staff

The project continuously expands its network and invites interested professionals to participate through contributions, testing, or public relations work. Regular online information sessions offer opportunities to learn about the project and discuss possibilities for cooperation.
